GOLDFIELDS LABOUR HIRE

Goldfields Labour Hire (GLH) is an Aboriginal owned and managed business providing civil and mining labour hire to the Goldfields region of Western Australia.

Our established workforce provides a range of specialised skills that support mining and civil project requirements, including heavy plant operations. The group is built up of both Aboriginal and Non-Aboriginal members of the community, with the goal of supporting and developing a majority Aboriginal workforce.

Directors Shannon Meyer and Lena Abdullah (Tjarru Tjarru tribe) are Goldfields locals, well known across the region with significant experience in community engagement, cultural awareness, and correctional services. With a strong desire to support positive outcomes in the community and the experience to back them up, GLH is currently developing a Prison Reintegration Program that will provide training, mentorship and career pathways.

Our mission is to be part of the growing and developing multicultural country in which we live, providing Labour and continued up-skilling through a broad range of Nationally Accredited courses, and a range of quality skilled Labour to industry.

Our aim is to help individuals empower themselves by providing opportunities through training and integration into employment, and sustain a balance in all areas between employment and personal life.

OUR STORY

Directors Shannon Meyer and Lena Abdullah have been employed in the Correctional Services industry, where they have been exposed to prison work programs which aim to create employment skills for low-risk prisoners prior to the end of their custodial sentence.

GLH was founded with the goal of creating a trusted and reliable labour hire company that would facilitate the development of their own training and career pathway, aiming to reduce the rate of re-offences in the local community, and provide a sense of belonging.

Starting with their first agreement with Linkforce WA to provide a mining shutdown crew, GLH aim to expand their workforce and grow their program to support career opportunities for all of the local community.
